Appendix A: Legislation

A.1 Summary of legislation

Commonwealth

Intercountry adoption in Australia at the Commonwealth level is governed by the following legislation:

- Family Law Act 1975
- Family Law (Hague Convention on Intercountry Adoption) Regulations 1998
- Family Law (Bilateral Arrangements—Intercountry Adoption) Regulations 1998.

The following legislation relating to immigration matters also governs aspects of intercountry adoption:

- Immigration (Guardianship of Children) Act 1946
- Migration Act 1958
- Migration Regulations 1994
- Australian Citizenship Act 2007.

New South Wales

- Adoption Act 2000
- Adoption Regulation 2015

Level of court

- Supreme Court of New South Wales

Step-parent adoptions

Step-parents apply directly to the Supreme Court to adopt a stepchild in their care.

The child must be 5 years old and have resided with the step-parent for at least 2 years immediately before the application. The step-parent must provide a report with their application to the court to assist in its decision making. This report must be completed by an adoption assessor approved by the New South Wales Department of Family and Community Services (FACS).

Relative adoptions

There is provision for adoptions by relatives. The child must have had an established relationship for at least 2 years with the applicant(s). These adoptions are made only in exceptional circumstances—that is, where a parental responsibility order or other order made through the Family Court would not adequately provide for the interests and welfare of the child.

Authorised carer adoptions

Children who are unable to live with their parents or extended family are placed with authorised carers (foster carers) under an order of the Children's Court allocating parental responsibility to the Minister of FACS. An authorised carer, who is also an approved adoptive applicant, may adopt a child in their care, if this is assessed as being an appropriate permanency plan for the child. Adoption must be clearly preferable to any other order and in the best interests of the child.

The consent of both birth parents is sought. Where the child and carer(s) have established a stable relationship, and it is assessed that adoption will promote the child's welfare and is in their best interests, the Supreme Court may dispense with the consent of 1 or both birth parents. Where possible, a parent whose consent is dispensed with must be notified of the adoption application. The consent of any other person with any aspect of Parental Responsibility for the child is also required.

The sole consent of a child aged 12 or over must be given where the child has been assessed to have the capacity to understand the effects of giving consent, and has been cared for by the prospective adoptive parent(s) for at least 2 years. Where possible, the birth parents and any guardian must be notified of the adoption application. No other consent is required. Where a child aged 12 or over does not have the capacity to give consent, the requirement for their consent may be dispensed with by the Supreme Court. If the child's consent is dispensed with, the consent of the parents and any other person with any aspect of Parental Responsibility for the child is required.

All parties to an adoption are encouraged to participate in developing an adoption plan—a written plan that explains how the child will remain connected to their birth family and culture through their growing years. At least 2 parties to an adoption must agree to the adoption plan. A non-consenting birth parent who agrees to an adoption plan is to be treated as if they were a party to the adoption of the child.

If an adoption plan is registered in the Supreme Court, it becomes part of the adoption order, and becomes enforceable as an order of the Supreme Court.

Local and intercountry adoptions

To apply for an adoption in New South Wales, applicant(s) must:

- live in New South Wales
- be aged over 21
- be either a single person or a couple who have been living together continuously for 2 years.

Gazetted selection criteria apply, and are available from the website at <https://www.facs.nsw.gov.au/download?file=319617>.

The main consideration for any adoption order being made is that it is in the best interests of the child, in both childhood and later life.

Arrangements must be made by FACS, or accredited adoption service providers (Anglican Community Services, Barnardos Australia and Family Spirit Adoption Services). Intercountry adoption arrangements can currently be made only by FACS.

Official client

An applicant becomes an official client of Adoption Services when a formal application has been lodged (after lodging an expression of interest and attending the relevant training seminar).

Adoption of Indigenous children

Adoption is not customary in Aboriginal communities. Instead, alternative permanent care options are typically pursued for Aboriginal children entering out-of-home care.

There are provisions in the NSW Adoption Act 2000 for the adoption of Aboriginal children for whom it is the best permanency option. Open adoption for Aboriginal children is not actively promoted by FACS, however, it is able to occur when it is clearly preferable above any other care arrangements.

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children must be placed in accordance with the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Placement Principles.

Adoption of adults

A person aged 18 or over who was cared for by the prospective adoptive parent as their child before turning 18, and who is in a 'fit condition' to give consent, may give sole consent to their own adoption. The Supreme Court must not dispense with the consent of a person who is 18 or over.

An adoption application is generally lodged directly with the Supreme Court, with little or no involvement from Adoption Services other than providing a report to the Supreme Court at the court's request.

Victoria

- Adoption Act 1984
- Adoption Regulations 2008
- Adoption Amendment Act 2013
- Adoption Amendment Act 2015

Level of court

- Supreme Court of Victoria and County Court of Victoria

Step-parent and other relative adoptions

In all cases when a child is placed with relatives, attempts are made for this to happen on an order made through the Family Court. An adoption order in favour of a relative or step-parent is made only if exceptional circumstances exist and if an order from the Family Court will not make adequate provision for the welfare and interests of the child.

A solicitor may prepare an application for formal adoption by a step-parent or other relative. The application must be made to the Victorian Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS Vic) or an approved non-government adoption agency for an assessment report on the prospective adoptive parent(s). The report is submitted with the application to the County Court or Supreme Court.

Adoptions are arranged by DHHS Vic or an approved non-government agency (listed in the section following).

Local and intercountry adoptions

To apply for an adoption in Victoria, the applicant(s) must be one of the following:

- 2 persons who:
 - are married to each other
 - whose relationship is recognised as a traditional marriage by an Aboriginal community or an Aboriginal group to which they belong
 - are in a registered domestic relationship with each other
 - are living in a domestic relationship and who have been so living for not less than 2 years before the date on which the order is made
- a single person, if the child faces special circumstances.

The Adoption Amendment (Adoption by Same-Sex Couples) Act 2015 (Vic) came into effect on 1 September 2016. This Act means that lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex (LGBTI) couples can apply to adopt under the same circumstances as any other couple in Victoria.

Intercountry adoptions are arranged only via DHHS Vic. However, local adoptions may be arranged by DHHS Vic or approved non-government organisations (Anglicare Gippsland, Anglicare St Luke's, Anglicare Western, Family Spirit, Child and Family Services Ballarat, and Connections).

Official client

An applicant becomes an official client for the purposes of intercountry adoption when they make an application.

Adoption of Indigenous children

The Victorian Adoption Act recognises the principles of Indigenous self-management and self-determination, and that adoption is not available in Indigenous child care arrangements.

Restrictive eligibility criteria are in place for the selection of adoptive parents for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children. The birth parent(s) of an Indigenous child can place the condition on adoption that the child go to an Indigenous adoptive parent(s), or that a right of access be granted to the birth parent(s), other relatives and members of the Indigenous community.

Adoption of adults

Section 10 of the Victorian Adoption Act allows the court to grant an adoption order for the adoption of an adult who has been brought up, maintained and educated by the applicant(s) acting as the parent(s) of the person. The adoption proceeds without the involvement of DHHS Vic or approved adoption agency, and does not require the consent of the person's birth parents.

Queensland

- Adoption Act 2009
- Adoption Regulation 2009

The Act and its regulations took effect on 1 February 2010 with a review/update of the Act being assented to in November 2016.

Level of court

- Childrens Court of Queensland

Step-parent adoptions

Adoption by step-parents can be arranged only through the Queensland Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women (DCSYW).

Other relative adoptions

If adoption by a relative is the best option for securing a child's long-term care, the DCSYW can ask a relative to consider being assessed as a prospective adoptive parent for the child. However, the relative cannot initiate the process.

Local and intercountry adoptions

A person is eligible to have the person's name entered or remain in the expression of interest register if:

- the person is an adult
- the person or the person's spouse is an Australian citizen
- the person is resident or domiciled in Queensland
- the person is not pregnant
- the person is not an intended parent under a surrogacy arrangement within the meaning of the Surrogacy Act 2010
- for a person who has been an intended parent for a surrogacy arrangement within the meaning of the Surrogacy Act 2010—the surrogacy arrangement ended at least 6 months earlier
- the person does not have custody of (does not include children of whom the person is an approved carer):
 - a child aged less than 1 year
 - a child who has been in the person's custody for less than 1 year; and
- for a person who has a spouse:
 - the person and the spouse made an expression of interest jointly under division 2
 - the spouse is also eligible under conditions above
 - the person and the spouse are living together.

A person who made an expression of interest jointly with the person's spouse is not eligible to have the person's name remain in the expression of interest register if the spouse stops being the person's spouse.

The DCSYW is the only agency legally authorised to arrange adoptions in Queensland.

Official client

Applicants become 'official clients' after they lodge an expression of interest to adopt a child with Adoption Services.

Adoption of Indigenous children

The Queensland Adoption Act respects Indigenous custom by not promoting adoption as an appropriate option for the long-term care of an Indigenous child.

The Act includes safeguards to ensure, where parents and guardians of an Indigenous child do explore adoption for a child's care, that the child's culture is respected and the adoption proceeds only if there is no better option available for the child's long-term stable care.

The DCSYW must provide counselling and information to all parents involved, and the option of receiving counselling and information about specific issues from an appropriate Indigenous person to the parents of the Indigenous child.

The Act includes the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Child Placement Principle, which requires the DCSYW to consider placing the child (in order of priority) with:

1. a member of the child's community or language group
2. another Indigenous person who is compatible with the child's community or language group
3. another Indigenous person.

The DCSYW must consult an appropriate Indigenous person in selecting a couple to be considered as the child's prospective adoptive parents.

An adoption plan between the parties to the adoption is mandatory if an Indigenous child is to be adopted by a couple from outside his or her community. The plan must include agreement on how the child might be assisted to develop a cultural identity, including establishing links with cultural heritage and with members of his or her community or language group.

Before making any decisions about the adoption of an Indigenous child, the Children's Court is required to consider the views of an appropriate Indigenous person about the child's interests, and any traditions or customs relating to the child.

Adoption of adults

The Queensland Adoption Act does not make provision for an adult to be adopted. An adoption order can be made only for a child aged under 18.

Western Australia

- Adoption Act 1994
- Adoption Regulations 1995
- Family Law Act 1975
- Family Court Act 1997

Level of court

- Family Court of Western Australia

Local and intercountry adoptions

All adoptions are arranged through the Department of Communities (the Department). Applicants must meet specific eligibility criteria before being considered for assessment.

For local adoptions, all known birth parents must give consent to their child's adoption. Birth parents are involved in the selection process of prospective adoptive parents by selecting a family from non-identifying profiles.

An adoption plan is required between birth parents and adopting parents.

In addition, the intercountry adoption process must meet principles and standards of the Hague Convention on Protection of Children and Cooperation in Respect of Intercountry

Adoption. Western Australia is responsible for the management of individual adoptions under these agreements.

Step-parent adoptions

Step-parents can apply to adopt a child under the Adoptions Act 1994 if they have been married to, or in a de facto relationship with, a birth parent of the child for at least three years. The consent of the non-custodial birth parent, or an order from the Family Court of Western Australia (the Court) to dispense with such consent is required. Before the adoption can be finalised, an adoption plan is negotiated between the non-custodial birth parent and the adoptive parent, or dispensed with by the Court.

Step-parents wishing to adopt their stepchild are required to provide written notification to the Department, at least 60 days before their application is filed, of their intention to apply for an adoption order.

After receiving notice of the step-parent's intention to adopt, the Department's Chief Executive Officer will arrange for a report to outline whether the applicant satisfies the legislative requirements for an adoption order to be made.

Other relative adoptions

Adoption by relatives is permitted under certain circumstances. The definition of 'relative' is limited to a person's grandparent, sibling, uncle or aunt. A relative adoption can occur only where the relative has had full-time care of the child for at least two consecutive years.

Approval of the child's placement with the prospective relative adoptive parents must be authorised by the Chief Executive Officer with a view to the child being adopted by the relative.

Prior to making an adoption order in favour of a relative, the court must be satisfied that there are good reasons to redefine the relationships within the child's family and that it would be preferable to a parenting order under the Family Law Act 1974 (Cwlth) and the Family Court Act 1997 (WA).

Where the child is in the care of the Chief Executive Officer under a protection order (time limited), or (until 18) made pursuant to the Children and Community Services Act 2004 (CCS Act), relative adoption can occur if relatives meet the adoption criteria requirements, and the Chief Executive Officer is satisfied that the child's adoption is preferable to a protection order (special guardianship).

Carer adoptions

Approval of the child's placement with the carer must be authorised by the Chief Executive Officer with a view to the child being adopted by the carer. Where the child is in the care of the Chief Executive Officer under a protection order (time limited), or (until 18) made pursuant to the CCS Act, carer adoption can occur if carers meet the adoption criteria requirements, and the Chief Executive Officer is satisfied that the child's adoption is preferable to a protection order (special guardianship).

Carers must have had full-time care of the child for at least two consecutive years before making an application to adopt the child. Birth parental consent is required for the child's adoption, or an order from the Court can be made to dispense with consent under certain circumstances. Unless dispensed with by the Court, an adoption plan must be negotiated by parties to the adoption as it is a legal requirement.

Official client

Applicants must meet specific eligibility criteria to be considered for adoptive parenthood. Applicants become 'official clients' after the Department has considered their expression of interest application.

As part of the adoption process, applicants are required to attend the relevant education sessions before lodging their expression of interest.

Adoption of Indigenous children

Section 3(2) of the Western Australian Adoption Act states that it is acknowledged that adoption is not part of Aboriginal or Torres Strait Island culture and that the adoption of a child who is an Aboriginal person or Torres Strait Islander should occur only in circumstances where there is no other appropriate alternative for the child.

Under section 16A of the Western Australian Adoption Act, regarding the prospective adoption of a child who is an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander, the Chief Executive Officer must consult with:

- an officer of the Department who is an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander
- an Aboriginal person or Torres Strait Islander who, in the opinion of the Chief Executive Officer, has relevant knowledge of the child, the child's family or the child's community
- an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander agency that, in the opinion of the Chief Executive Officer, has relevant knowledge of the child, the child's family or the child's community.

Adoption of adults

An adult may be adopted by a person who was his or her carer or a step-parent immediately before he or she turns 18. Both the prospective adoptee and the prospective adoptive parent must consent to the adoption, and both birth parents of the prospective adoptee must be notified of the intention to apply for an adoption order. Parties who are required to sign consents must not do so unless the Department's Chief Executive Officer has provided them with the information set out in Schedule 1 of the Western Australian Adoption Act.

The Chief Executive Officer is not required to provide a report to the Court (unless requested by the Court).

South Australia

Adoption Act review

In December 2016, the Adoption (Review) Amendment Act 2016 (the Amendment Act) was passed in the South Australian Parliament. The Amendment Act put into place the recommendations of a 2015 review of the Adoption Act 1988 commissioned by the South Australian Government.

The Amendment Act provides for: the abolition of information vetoes and their phasing out over 5 years; adoption by same-sex couples; integrated birth certificates for adopted people; adult adoption; and discharge of adoption orders in special circumstances.

A number of amendments commenced in 2017. The remainder of the amendments commenced on 15 December 2018.

Step-parent adoptions

In all cases, 'leave to proceed', granted in the Family Court, is required before step-parents can apply to adopt a stepchild.

Adoption by step-parents is granted only when there is no other order that will adequately provide for the interests and welfare of the child. The Department for Child Protection is required to provide counselling for the relevant consents, as well as a report to the Youth Court.

Other relative adoptions

Adoptions by relatives other than step-parents are granted only when there is no other order that will adequately provide for the interests and welfare of the child. The Department for Child Protection is required to provide counselling for the relevant consents, as well as a report to the Youth Court.

Local and intercountry adoptions

To be eligible, the applicant(s) must be either:

- a couple in a qualifying relationship for a continuous period of at least 5 years at the time the adoption order is made, or 3 years for allocation or placement of the child, or
- a single person, in special circumstances.

Official client

An applicant to be a registered prospective adoptive parent becomes an official client when they lodge an expression of interest to adopt a child with the Department for Child Protection.

Both members of a couple must attend an information session about adoption before lodging an expression of interest.

Adoption of Indigenous children

The Adoption (Review) Amendment Act 2016 elevated the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Child Placement Principle to the Objects and guiding principles of the Adoption Act 1988. This requires that 'a person or body exercising a function or power under this Act in relation to an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child must observe the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Child Placement Principle'. This includes the Department for Child Protection and the Youth Court.

The Amendment Act also requires that the Youth Court must not make an adoption order in relation to an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander child 'unless satisfied that adoption is in the best interests of the child and, taking into account the rights and welfare of the child, clearly preferable to any alternative order that may be made under the laws of the State or the Commonwealth'.

The court must also consider a report from the Chief Executive of the Department for Child Protection setting out consultation that has occurred with a recognised Aboriginal organisation or recognised Torres Strait Islander organisation; and any submissions made by or on behalf of a recognised Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander organisation consulted in relation to the child.

This amendment commenced on 15 December 2018.

Adoption of adults

The Adoption (Review) Amendment Act 2016 provided for the adoption of adults in certain circumstances. This amendment commenced on 15 December 2018.

Tasmania

- Adoption Act 1988
- Adoption Regulations 2016
- Adoption Amendment Act 2007

Level of court

- Magistrate sitting alone

Step-parent adoptions

Adoption by step-parents is possible in some circumstances. If the child's father has not legally established his paternity, an application may be considered by the Tasmanian Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS Tas). If the child's paternity has been legally established, adoption is possible only in special circumstances that justify adoption, and when other available orders will not provide adequately for the welfare and interests of the child.

All applications for an adoption order in favour of a step-parent adoption must be made through DHHS Tas.

Other relative adoptions

The court's power to make an adoption order in favour of a relative is limited to special circumstances that justify adoption, and when other available orders will not provide adequately for the welfare and interests of the child.

All applications for an adoption order in favour of a relative must be made through DHHS Tas.

Carer adoptions

Adoption may be considered for a child in out-of-home care where it is considered to be in the child's best interests. DHHS Tas has established a policy that provides advice and clarifies the requirements on adoption by foster carers.

All applications for an adoption order in favour of a foster carer adoption must be made through DHHS Tas.

Local and intercountry adoptions

To be eligible, the applicant(s) must be either:

- a couple who are married or in a registered relationship and have lived together in a stable, continuous relationship for not less than 3 years, or
- a single person, in special circumstances that relate to the welfare and interests of the child.

Adoptions by non-relatives can be arranged by DHHS Tas or a non-government organisation approved by the Tasmanian Minister for Children.

Official client

In Tasmania, an applicant becomes an official client for the purpose of intercountry adoption once their adoption application has been registered.

Adoption of Indigenous children

Adoption of Indigenous children is not included in the legislation, although the birth parent(s) may express wishes about race of adoptive parent(s). The cultural differences of Indigenous Australians are recognised, and placement within the Indigenous community is preferred.

Adoption of adults

The Tasmanian Adoption Act provides for adult adoptions when a person has been brought up, maintained and educated by the prospective adoptive parent, or either of the prospective adoptive parents, or the prospective adoptive parent and his or her deceased spouse.

The court cannot make an order for the adoption of a person who is, or has been, married. It must also be satisfied that there are special circumstances for the welfare and interests of the person that make it desirable for the person to be adopted.

Australian Capital Territory

- Adoption Act 1993
- Adoption Amendment Act 2009

Level of court

- Supreme Court of the Australian Capital Territory

Step-parent adoptions

Adoption by step-parents can be arranged only through Child and Youth Protection Services.

Other relative adoptions

Adoptions by relatives other than step-parents are granted only when a guardianship or custody order will not adequately provide for the interests and welfare of the child.

Adoption by relatives can be arranged only through Child and Youth Protection Services.

Local and intercountry adoptions

To be eligible, the applicant(s) must be either:

- a married couple for more than 3 years, or
- a de facto couple for more than 3 years, or
- a single person in particular circumstances.

Adoptions by non-relatives must be arranged through Child and Youth Protection Services.

Official client

A person becomes an official client at the point at which the Assessment and Support Unit of Child and Youth Protection Services receives a completed application form.

Adoption of Indigenous children

Restrictive eligibility criteria apply for adoptive parents in accordance with the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Child Placement Principle.

Adoption of adults

Adult adoptions are legal under the Australian Capital Territory Adoption Act, where the person is resident in the Australian Capital Territory, and has been brought up, maintained and educated by the applicants under a de facto adoption.

Northern Territory

- Adoption of Children Act 1994
- Adoption of Children Amendment Act 2006
- Adoption of Children Act 2018.

The Northern Territory Adoption of Children Amendment Act, which came into effect on 3 July 2006, enables the issue of Australian birth certificates for overseas-born adopted children whenever the necessary birth information is provided by the country of origin. This applies irrespective of whether the adoption is finalised in the Local Court or as a foreign adoption order, automatically recognised under Australian law.

Level of court

- Northern Territory Local Court

Step-parent adoptions

Other arrangements are sought before an adoption order is considered.

Other relative adoptions

Adoptions by relatives other than step-parents are granted only when a guardianship or custody order will not adequately provide for the interests and welfare of the child.

Carer adoptions

Carers may lodge an expression of interest to adopt the child they are caring for in special circumstances. Birth parental consent is required for the child's adoption, unless the Local Court has made an order dispensing with that consent.

Local and intercountry adoptions

Eligibility requirements allow/require the applicant(s) to:

- be no more than 40 years older than the child, or 45 years older than the child if previous children are in the family
- have other requirements in regard to the age of adoptive parent(s) considered in exceptional circumstances
- be a single person in exceptional circumstances.

All adoptions must be arranged through Territory Families.

Official client

An applicant becomes an official client when they lodge an adoption application.

Adoption of Indigenous children

Adoptions of Indigenous children can occur only if alternative custody with the child's extended family cannot be arranged. If an order is made, it must comply with the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Child Placement Principle.

A.2 Provisions for 'open' adoptions

New South Wales

New South Wales recognises that a variety of relationships might exist between a child's adoptive and birth families, but strongly supports the child's connections with their birth family and culture through openness in adoption attitudes, and actions between birth and adoptive families. An adoption plan, which might include the regular exchange of information and/or contact, is usually provided to the court at the time an adoption order is sought.

For local adoptions in New South Wales, birth parents participate in choosing the adoptive family for their child. FACS or the agency that arranged the adoption might help mediate ongoing contact after the adoption order, if necessary.

Victoria

The Victorian Adoption Act allows an adoption order to include conditions on information exchange and/or access between the parties. After signing the consent, birth parents are given the opportunity to express their wishes about contact and information exchange, which are considered when placement decisions are made.

The Victorian Adoption Act requires that birth parents' wishes are taken into account in selection of an adoptive family. In practice, at the time of signing the consent, birth parents are asked whether they wish to be actively involved in selecting an adoptive family. They are encouraged to consider profile information on approved adoption applicants who have been assessed as suitable for the child, and to indicate the couple with whom they would prefer the child to be placed.

After placement, there might be direct contact between the parties, or an exchange of information.

Queensland

Under the Queensland Adoption Act, all parties to an adoption have access to non-identifying information. Where an adopted person is aged under 18, parties to an adoption can access identifying information only if both the adoptive and birth parents agree and provide consent. Where a child's prospective adoptive parent(s) and birth parent(s) wish to have contact after the adoption order is made, an adoption plan is compulsory, and must be in place before a final adoption order can be made. The DCSYW must help parties negotiate an adoption plan at the time a child's adoption is arranged or after an adoption order has been made, if assistance is requested.

Western Australia

Since the inception of Western Australia's Adoption Act 1994, all adoptions in Western Australia are conducted in the spirit of openness and recognises the need for people affected by adoption to have access to information.

An adoption plan enables contact and exchange of information between parties to the adoption. Before placement of a child occurs, an adoption plan is negotiated between birth parents and prospective adoptive parents. Under certain circumstances, the adoption plan can be dispensed with by applying to the Family Court of Western Australia (the Court).

Adoption plans can be modified by parties to adoption and be approved by the Court. Before parties can apply to the Court to modify the adoption plan, they are required to participate in a mediation process conducted by the Department. The Chief Executive Officer is required to certify that mediation has been completed. Mediation is not required for parties to adoption plans for an adoption by a step-parent, relative or carer. These parties can apply directly to the Court to vary the adoption plan.

South Australia

Under the South Australian Adoption Act, open arrangements are possible between parties to the adoption. This can involve access to information or contact between the parties. The arrangements are not legally binding, and are facilitated and mediated by the South Australian Department for Child Protection.

Tasmania

Under the Tasmanian Adoption Act, open adoptions are possible between parties to the adoption. The adoption forms (Adoption Regulations 2006) allow parties to express wishes about ongoing contact and information exchange at the time of the adoption. These exchanges are generally facilitated by DHHS Tas. Arrangements for contact and information exchange are not legally binding.

Australian Capital Territory

Legislation allows for conditional orders (that is, where contact frequency and other arrangements can be specified). Since the 1993 adoption legislation, all adoptions are considered open—that is, some form of contact or information exchange is encouraged. Conditional orders are now routinely recommended to the court.

Northern Territory

Open adoptions have been available since the Northern Territory's Adoption of Children Act 1994 was introduced. It is an option for relinquishing parents to request an open adoption, and an arrangement may be made with adoptive parents, although such an arrangement is not legally binding.

A.3 Access to information and veto systems

New South Wales

Access to information

The Adoption Act 2000 (NSW) makes different provisions for the release of information, depending on whether the adopted person is under or over 18, and whether an adoption order was made before or after 1 January 2010.

For adoptions made after 1 January 2010, adopted persons, adoptive parents, birth parents, and adopted and non-adopted siblings of an adopted person can gain identifying information about each other, and search for each other from the day the adoption order is made.

Where the adopted person is aged under 18, the adopted person requires the consent of their surviving adoptive parents or of the Secretary of FACS to apply.

Birth parents and non-adopted siblings (where the adopted person is aged under 18) must first apply to the Secretary for an authority to obtain identifying information, and, before an authority can be released, an assessment must be made to determine whether the release of identifying information would pose any risk to the safety, welfare or wellbeing of the adopted person or adoptive parents.

Non-adopted siblings under the age of 18 require the consent of their parents or the Secretary to apply.

Where the adopted person is aged 18 or over an Adoption Information Certificate is not required; but if a non-adopted sibling is under 18, the sibling must have the consent of their parents or the Secretary. If consent is given by their parents or the Secretary, then an Adoption Information Certificate will be issued.

For adoptions made before 1 January 2010, birth parents, adoptive parents (with the consent of the adopted person) and adopted siblings can access identifying information once the adopted person turns 18. All parties must first apply to the Secretary for an Adoption Information Certificate. Before an Adoption Information Certificate is issued, a check is done to see whether the application is subject to an advance notice or contact veto.

While an adopted person is under 18, birth parents and adoptive parents can access non-identifying information. With the permission of the other parents (birth or adoptive parents), identifying information can also be provided.

For people without other entitlements under the Act to receive identifying information, the legislation enables the Secretary to make adoption information available where it would be reasonable to do so.

The Act enables anyone who had a close personal relationship with a deceased adopted person or deceased birth parent to apply to the Secretary for adoption information. This is referred to as inheriting rights.

Advance Notice Register

Adult adopted persons, birth parents and adoptive parents who are parties to an adoption may lodge an Advance Notice Application. This enables them to be advised if another party to an adoption applies for identifying information. The release of their personal information is then delayed for up to 3 months to allow the registered person to prepare for its release—for example, a birth mother might need time to tell her current partner about the adoption.

Contact Veto Register

Where an adoption order was made before 26 October 1990, birth parents and adult adopted persons are able to lodge a contact veto. A veto cannot be lodged for an adoption that occurred after that date. The veto prevents only contact. It does not prevent the release of identifying adoption information.

Once a veto is lodged, it becomes an offence for the person applying for the identifying information to try to make contact with the person who lodged the veto, or for them to have someone else try to make contact on their behalf. Information that is subject to a contact veto will be released to an applicant only if he/she gives a written legal undertaking not to use the information to seek contact.

Reunion and Information Register

Parties to an adoption and other people may apply to register their name in the Reunion and Information Register. Their registration enables them to be matched with another person who has also registered for the same adoption.

Once matched, the parties may then choose to be put in contact with each other and be reunited. Registration on the Reunion and Information Register also enables the Adoption Information Unit and other adoption agencies to act on behalf of the registered person to locate a person from whom they have been separated as a consequence of adoption.

Victoria

Access to information

In Victoria, an adopted person aged 18 or over may apply for a copy of his or her original birth certificate and adoption records.

An adopted person aged under 18 requires the written agreement of his or her adoptive parent(s) before information can be given; the written consent of the birth parent(s) is also required before identifying information can be given.

From 1 July 2013, birth parents have a right to identifying information about an adopted child who is now an adult. Birth relatives may obtain non-identifying information from records about the adopted person. Identifying information can be given with the written consent of the adoptive parent(s) if the adopted person is under 18.

Adult children of adopted persons have the same rights to information as the adopted person, providing the adopted person is first informed in writing and has not objected to the release of their adoption information, or, where the adopted person is dead, a copy of the death certificate is provided.

Adoptive parents may apply for information about the birth family's background. The written permission of the birth parent is required before identifying information may be released. Where the adopted person is aged 18 or over, the adopted person must be notified in writing of the intention to release identifying information about the birth family.

Veto system

In Victoria, an adoption information register system operates on which people can record their wishes in relation to giving or receiving information and making contact. An authorised agency can facilitate contact between parties to an adoption.

In 2013, the Adoption Amendment Act 2013 (Vic) introduced a contact veto scheme whereby adult adopted persons may lodge a 'contact statement' specifying whether or how they wish to be contacted by their birth parent. 'Identifying information' vetoes do not exist in Victoria.

In 2015, the Adoption Amendment Act 2015 (Vic) repealed the contact veto scheme. Contact statements that were lodged before the commencement of the Adoption Amendment Act 2015, on 26 August 2016, will continue in force until they expire (5 years from lodgement).

Queensland

Access to information

The Adoption Act 2009 (Qld) makes different provisions for the release of information, depending on whether an adopted person is under or over the age of 18, and whether an adoption order was made before or after 1 June 1991.

Adopted persons and birth parents are entitled to receive identifying information once the adopted person has reached 18. Where the adopted child is under 18, identifying information can be provided if consent is given by both the adoptive and the birth parents.

In certain circumstances, eligible relatives of an adopted person or birth parent who signed an adoption consent can obtain identifying information. This includes siblings of the adopted person who were not adopted.

The adopted person and the birth parent(s) who signed the adoption consent can lodge a contact statement to express their wishes about how they would prefer to be contacted, or to express their wish not to be contacted. It is no longer an offence for an adopted person or birth parent affected by an adoption order made before 1 June 1991 to contact another party who has requested no contact.

To support people accessing information and considering contact statements, the Queensland Government also funds Post Adoption Support Queensland to provide counselling and support to people affected by adoption. This service offers:

- telephone counselling and support
- face-to-face counselling
- support and information during the search process
- mediation and assistance for people wishing to make contact with relatives.

Veto (contact statement) system

In Queensland, the enactment of the Adoption Act brought significant changes to vetoes. The repealed Adoption of Children Act 1964 (Qld) provided for objections to contact—and objections to the disclosure of identifying information—to be lodged by adopted persons or by birth parents affected by an adoption order made before 1 June 1991.

On 1 February 2010, all objections then in force under this repealed Act were reconstituted as a contact statement that specifically requested no contact (effectively, a contact veto).

A contact statement remains in place unless it is revoked by the person who lodged it, or the person dies. It is no longer an offence for an adopted person or birth parent affected by an adoption order made before 1 June 1991 to contact another party who has requested no contact. If a request for no contact is in place, identifying information can be provided only if the person seeking information has signed an acknowledgment indicating that they are aware the contact statement requesting no contact is in place.

The release of identifying information can be restricted only if the Childrens Court has made an order preventing it, where it is deemed the release would pose an unacceptable risk of harm.

Western Australia

Access to information

All parties to an adoption may apply for access to either identifying or non-identifying information. Under the Adoption Act 1994, all parties can apply for access to birth records and adoption court records (identifying information). Birth parents, adoptive parents and adopted persons may apply for access to information about the adoption from departmental records, at the discretionary authority of the Department for Communities — Child Protection and Family Support's Chief Executive Officer. The level of information depends on the information recorded at the time and whether the records still exist.

Birth siblings of adoptees have the right to access court records and birth registration information about their adoptee sibling, provided that the sibling and adoptee are both aged 18 or over.

Veto system

In Western Australia, a 'message box system' allows anonymous contact between parties to an adoption. The 2003 amendments to the Adoption Act 1994 resulted in information Vetos no longer being effective and no new Vetoes could be registered. People previously affected by an information Veto could now access identifying information. Contact Vetoes are still in effect for the period stated by the person who lodged the statement of wishes; or until this person dies or cancels the veto. However, a party to the adoption may apply to the Court for an order to prevent the authorisation of access to identifying information if the Court is satisfied that the person's access to the information would likely place the applicant, their spouse, or their children at serious risk.

South Australia

Access to information

In South Australia, adopted persons aged 18 or over can access information in their original birth certificate, as well as details about their birth parents (if known), such as name, date of birth, physical attributes and personal interests.

Adopted persons are also entitled to know the names of any biological siblings who were also adopted.

Information may be provided to an adopted person or a birth parent before the adopted person turns 18 years of age in certain circumstances.

Once the adopted person reaches the age of 18, the birth parents can access the adoptive name of their relinquished child and the name(s) of the adoptive parent(s). Adoptive parents, descendants of an adopted person, and some birth relatives of the adopted person can apply for certain information under some circumstances.

Veto system

The adoption information veto system was abolished on 18 December 2017 through the Adoption (Review) Amendment Act 2016. A 5-year phase out period commencing on that date meant that all vetoes that were in place when the Amendment Act commenced will expire on 17 December 2022. A specific contact veto is not available under the amended Adoption Act 1988.

Previously, both adopted persons and each birth parent could veto the release of identifying information about themselves. Adoptive parents could also place a veto on information about their identifying information, as long as this did not prevent the release of information about the adopted person. These veto provisions were available only for adoptions that occurred before the Adoption Act 1988 (SA) came into force (August 1989).

Tasmania

Access to information

In Tasmania, an adopted person aged 18 or over may apply for access to his or her pre-adoption birth record and information from the adoption record. An adopted person aged under 18 may apply for this information with the written consent of his or her adoptive parent(s).

Birth parents, birth relatives and lineal descendants of an adopted person may apply for non-identifying information at any time, or for identifying information when the adopted person is aged 18 or over.

Adoptive parents may apply for non-identifying information at any time, but may receive information that includes the name of a birth parent only with the written permission of the birth parent concerned.

All applicants who reside in Tasmania must attend an interview with an approved counsellor before receiving information.

Veto system

The right to information is unqualified, but a contact veto may be registered. Any adopted person, birth parent, birth relative, lineal descendant of an adopted person or adoptive parent may register a contact veto. Where a veto has been registered, identifying information is released only after an undertaking not to attempt any form of contact has been signed. An attempt to make contact where a veto is in force is an offence. A contact veto may be lifted at any time by the person who lodged it.

Once the Adoption (Review) Amendment Act 2016 comes into law, vetoes will no longer be available.

Australian Capital Territory

Access to information

Under the Adoption Act 1993 (ACT), an adopted person aged 18 or over, birth parents, adoptive parents and birth relatives may apply for identifying information in relation to the adoption. Identifying information consists of a copy of, or extract from, an entry in a register of births relating to the adopted child, or information from which a birth parent, birth relative or adopted child may be identified (excluding the address of a place of residence).

Before the Australian Capital Territory Adoption Act came into force in 1993, no provision for adoption information existed. However, because the Act is retrospective, information is now available for adoptions that occurred under the old Act.

Veto system

Under the Australian Capital Territory Adoption Act, only contact vetoes may be registered. The veto has to refer to a specified person or a specified class of persons.

The Act provides for an unqualified right to information, but also gives the adopted person aged over 17 years 6 months, an adoptive parent, birth parent, adult birth relatives, adoptive relatives and adult children or other descendants of the adopted person the right to lodge a contact veto. On lodgement of such a veto, it becomes an offence for the information recipient to try to make contact with the person who imposed the contact veto.

Where information is requested and a contact veto is in force, no information is given unless the person requesting information has attended a counselling service, and has signed a declaration that he or she will not attempt contact in any form.

Under the Adoption Amendment Act 2009 (ACT), vetoes can no longer be lodged in respect of adoption orders made after 22 April 2010. The Act also makes provision for greater accountability in obtaining consents to adoptions, augments the rights of the birth parents and promotes a more open system of adoption.

Northern Territory

Access to information

In the Northern Territory, legislation before the territory's Adoption of Children Act 1994 did not allow the release of information to any parties to an adoption. The current Act supports a more open process, with identifying information being available unless a veto has been lodged. Indigenous agencies, such as Link-Up, may be authorised to counsel for the purpose of supplying identifying information.

Veto system

A 3-year renewable veto may be lodged by the adopted person or birth parents for adoptions finalised before 1994. There is no veto provision for adoptions finalised under the current Act.

Total countries 99

(a) These countries have acceded to the Convention.

Notes

1. A country is counted as a Hague country only if the applicant/s file was sent after the Convention entered into force in this country.
2. Countries that participated in the Seventeenth Session (a particular conference held in The Hague) are able to sign this Convention, with the option of also ratifying it. Alternatively, countries that did not participate in the Seventeenth Session are able to accede to this Convention. By signing the Hague Convention, a country expresses, in principle, its intention to become a party to the Convention. However, signature does not, in any way, oblige a country to take further action (towards ratification or not). A country is party to the Hague Convention if it has ratified or acceded to the Convention—this involves the legal obligation for the country to apply the Convention once it has entered into force.
3. Nepal, the Russian Federation and South Korea have signed, but are yet to ratify, the Convention.
